

March 29, 2010

Dear Crafter,

Planning has begun for the 2010 Mountain Makins Festival, and this year marks the 35th annual celebration of Appalachian culture. This event draws over 6,000 people to listen to music and storytelling, watch a variety of dancers, enjoy good food, and of course shop for fine arts and crafts.

These arts and crafts are a very important part of the festival. Each year the crafts jury works to present the highest quality handcrafted wares to our visitors through a selective process. An effort is made to find new talent to add to our already excellent group of exhibitors. We appreciate your interest in Mountain Makins and invite you to apply.

The 2010 festival dates are October 23 and 24, with Preview evening on Friday the 22nd.

Mountain Makins is a festival honoring the rich traditions of the past, and supporting modern interpretations of those traditions. We look forward to another outstanding show of fine crafts.

On behalf of the Mountain Makins Crafts Committee and Rose Center, thank you!

Sincerely,

Beccy Hamm
Festival Director
